

Do I Need Legal Funding? What Works Best for My Firm?

As most plaintiffs and attorneys know, litigation can be a drawn-out process that can take up an enormous amount of time and resources. These delays are detrimental to all plaintiff-side parties involved with the case. Plaintiffs can be subject to lost wages, medical and legal expenses, and of course, lost time and energy.

The attorneys involved with these cases are similarly put out –they are often working on a contingency fee basis. As a result, it may be months or years until attorneys receive payment for their work, if they receive it at all.

Fortunately for both plaintiffs and attorneys, there are ways to access funds before an award is distributed so expenses can be paid off, lost and missing wages can be... read more

Lesson 2: The Power of Perspective: "What Else Can This Be?"

Perspective is a powerful and readily available idea and practice that not only makes sense in terms of the courtroom, but in terms of something more akin to a life purpose.

Try this question on a situation in your own life, whether it's an obstacle or a recent success (which, if you read my last article, is just an obstacle in disguise!)

What else can this be?

This question can point to a greater truth, which will provide the blueprints for leading to the winning story... read more
